PARRAMATTA FEMALE FACTORY – FOR ALL AUSTRALIANS

The Parramatta Convict Female Factory, the earliest convict women's site still in existence in Australia was a Governor Macquarie initiative. It was designed by Francis Greenway and the first stone was laid in 1818. Governor Brisbane commissioned the third class additions and Governor Gipps commissioned a three storey solitary cell block and courtyard. Of the estimated 9,000 who went through the female factory system an estimate 5,000 women went through the Parramatta Female Factory. It had the first dedicated women's health service in the Colony and it was the site of the first known female workers riot in Australia in 1827.

This 1818 Greenway designed factory replaced the first factory and was the model for the other 12. This factory predates all but 3 of the UNESCO world heritage listed items. The Factory closed in 1848 and became the Parramatta Lunatic Asylum. It is now a part of the Cumberland Hospital.

An estimated 1 in 5 to 1 in 7 Australians are related to these women.

24 960
transported women

 = 1,000 women       approx. 9, 000 women went through the factory system       5,000 went through the Parramatta Female Factory
